JADAVPUR UNIVERSITY: ORIGIN AND BEGINNINGS

The National Council of Education was set up in the initial years of the twentieth century. Its primary aim was to impart education- literary, scientific and technical on national lines and exclusively under national control . The foundation of NCE was made possible by the support of the likes of Raja Subodh Chandra Mullick, Brajendra Kishore Roychowdhury and Sir Rash Behari Ghosh, Sri Aurobindo Ghosh and the great poet and Nobel laureate Gurudev Rabindranath Tagore among others. In 1910 the Society for the Promotion of Technical Education in Bengal which looked after Bengal Technical Institute (which later became College of Engineering and Technology, Bengal) was amalgamated to NCE. NCE henceforth looked after the College of Engineering and Technology, Bengal which by 1940 was virtually functioning as a University. After Independence, the Government of West Bengal, with the concurrence of the Govt. of India, enacted the necessary legislation to establish Jadavpur University on the 24th of December 1955. Now Jadavpur University has successfully established itself as a foremost Indian University with a vast repertoire of courses offered, an enviable list of faculty members and has come to be known for its commitment towards advanced study and research.

Generous donations for the great cause of national education came from Raja Subodh Chandra Mallik, after whom the road on which Jadavpur University stands, is named, Brojendra Kishore Roy Choudhury, Maharaja Suryya Kanto Acharya Choudhury and others and National Council of Education (N.C.E.), Bengal proceeded with its programme. Subsequently came a princely bequest of Rs13lakhs from Sir Rashbehari Ghosh, the legendary legal luminary. Calcutta Corporation under the guidance of its Mayor Deshbandhu Chittaranjan Das leased out to N.C.E. the present site of Jadavpur Campus where its Engineering College was shifted in 1924. The Aurobindo Building, now housing the administrative offices, used to be the venue of teaching of the Engineering College. Alumni Association N.C.E. Bengal was established in 1921 which later became Alumni Association N.C.E. Bengal and Jadavpur University. This was the first Alumni Association organized by any University in India. It has its Old Boys Home in the University Campus. It is professionally active and generous. It is a pride that many ex-students have excelled in their respective professions and have made dedicated and pioneering contributions to the betterment of the country. The Association dedicated the Indoor Stadium and the Sports Pavilion to the University.

The Alumni Association NCE Bengal and Jadavpur University has branches in all the important cities of India and other countries. United States of America and Australia.

The Sydney Chapter of the Association commenced its function in 1992 with the aim of facilitating interactions between alumni members living in Australia. It also welcomes members from other reputed academic institutions of India such as Indian Institutes of Technology, National Institutes of Technology among others. Currently The Sydney chapter has about 30 members.
